

SEASONS IN THE WRIGLEY ESTATE

WILLIAM WRIGLEY was a creative giant whose life touched countless millions the world over. The late billionaire certainly knew how to satisfy America's taste for pleasure, and whenever he and his wife, Julie, sought the pleasures of relaxation and recreation for themselves, one of the places they would go is America's queen of winter resorts, fabled Sun Valley. The home, which William and Julie helped design, is everything you would expect from a man who was larger than life. Despite its 17,000 square feet, the home has a warm, welcoming atmosphere, incorporating stone and wood throughout. Its setting is breathtaking. Spectacular panoramas of Warm Springs, Bald Mountain, and the town of Ketchun dominate from every room. In fact, the best views in all of Sun Valley and Ketchum are showcased from the master suite, with its stone fireplace and travertine bath. The heart of the magnificent hideaway is the great room. Here, vaulted ceilings rise the full height of the skylit structure; a stone fireplace punctuates the drama. The home
